Research Focus

My research sits at the intersection of human-computer interaction and computer security and privacy. I use computational and social science methods to (1) examine people's needs and experiences with digital technologies; (2) identify and measure the harms created and amplified by digital technologies; and (3) design and evaluate interventions that mitigate these harms and enhance people's online and offline experiences. My vision is to work toward a future where digital technologies are safe and equitable for all, especially for marginalized and underserved communities.

Publications

See Google Scholar for citation records.

In computer science and information science (CS/IS) research, top-tier conferences are highly selective venues for archival papers only, comparable to journals in other disciplines for their selectivity, visibility, and impact. One may refer to the CORE Rankings and the acceptance rate for a general idea of a conference’s standing.

Authors are typically ordered such that leading students are listed from largest to smallest contribution from the left. Supervising faculty and postdocs are typically ordered from the right. The last author is the primary sponsor and supervisor.

* indicates equal contributions, usually for co-first or co-last authors.
